One of the things that has always broken my heart about Tom / is that when he is in <sup>2</sup> trouble / he stares very intently at you, / and one day I realised that what he was looking for was softness, / evidence that, [despite your disapproval of his misdemeanour] <sup>3</sup>, you still loved him. / Today, however, he's not interested. / He won't make eye contact with anyone in the room. /

'He's basically been pinching / anything that wasn't nailed down, says the head. /
'He's not very popular with his <sup>3</sup> schoolmates at the moment, / as you can <sup>1</sup> imagine.' / She's a nice, intelligent, gentle woman, Jeanie Field, / and she's always been very complimentary about our kids, / partly, I suspect, because they demand so little of her / They come to school. <sup>3</sup> They enjoy their lessons. / They don't hit anyone. They go home. / Now Tom has become just another drain on her time and her energy, / and it is that [as much as anything] <sup>3</sup> that is making me feel wretched.

Dans un esprit d'évaluation positive, on n'hésitera pas à bonifier – en seconde lecture et selon une échelle + 0,5 / + 1 / + 1,5 – les copies qui se lisent relativement facilement, avec intérêt, voire avec plaisir.

On tiendra compte du soin apporté à la présentation et à la rédaction. On valorisera tout particulièrement les copies dont les auteurs ont réagi au sujet proposé, en s'engageant et en exprimant un point de vue personnel.
